Cornell men are looking forward hopefully and with expectancy to the gridiron campaign of the "big red team" next fall, and it is no rash prediction that Cornell will be pretty much in the limelight when the autumn season swings around. Dobie, according to the report, is to arrive soon to take charge of football affairs for the entire year.

The coming of the attenuated gridiron mentor means that Cornell is apt to take its place among the topnotchers in the fall. It also means that the Ithacans will have a system entirely their own, excepting possibly the Navy, for no other coach uses Dobie tactics. Before telling of Dobie's system it might be well to relate a few facts concerning the sparsely built man who is asys but little, and then in a pessimistic yein.
